

Toshitaka Tsuda; He received BS, MS, and PhD degrees in electrical engineering from the University of Tokyo in 1970, 1972 and 1975, respectively. He joined Fujitsu Laboratories Ltd. in 1975, where he was engaged in R&D of digital signal processing, DSP LSI development, video coding and MPEG standardization, ISDN subscriber loop transmission system, optical transmission system, packet switch network, and micro processor architecture and LSI development. From 1978 to 1979, he was with the University of California, Berkeley, as a research associate. Currently, he is a Senior Vice President, Member of the Board of Fujitsu Laboratories Ltd with responsibility on R&D strategy, and Chairman of Fujitsu Laboratories of America Ltd. He is a Fellow member of IEEE and IEICE(Institute of Electrical, Information, and Communication Engineers, Japan), and the president-elect of IEICE.